Some students finding U-Pass not so universal

TRANSIT AGREEMENT

Those 'outside want changes to opt-out criteria

Braeden

Metro | Winnipeg

It's a U-Pass, but without bus service nearby, it's not a me-pass.

That's how some students feel about the universal bus pass — U-Pass for short — which, though meant to give Winnipeg's full-time students unlimited, affordable access to transit, falls short wherever the transit service does.

On Tuesday, councillors sitting on the infrastructure and public works committee (IRPW) will consider a motion to offer opt-outs not only to students residing outside of the perimeter, but also outside the transit service area.

Tanjit Nagra, president of the University of Manitoba Students'

Union (UMSU), said students are seeking exemptions due to an oversight in the negotiating process between participating student unions and the city, when those parties equated the Perimeter Highway with the range of Winnipeg Transit service.

As the agreement stands, students located outside of the perimeter can opt out, but she said there are students inside city limits who can't use transit either.

"If we can change the opt-out criteria to read 'outside transit service area' rather than 'outside the city limits,' that would be better for them," Nagra said.

Transit advocate Joseph Kornelsen said it's a "tough issue," because exempting students within the city limits negates some of "the value of the U-Pass" — chiefly, it's universality.

"Exemptions should not be made without clear policy reasoning," Kornelsen said. "Without clear policy, a pass like this could face death by a thousand exemptions, and that is not acceptable."

Driving forward on bus safety

PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

Transit union: New measures filled with 'good intentions'

Braeden Jones
Metro | Winnipeg

Three and a half months after a Winnipeg Transit operator was killed on the job, the city is ready to respond with several measures meant to bolster bus safety.

Two reports — one prepared by city staff and one from a group of councillors — detail several ways to make transit safer, from hiring more inspectors and installing more cameras, to zero tolerance on fare evasion and more.

John Callahan, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union local 1505, which represents Winnipeg's transit employees, said the security measures being proposed at Tuesday's infrastructure and public works committee (IRPW) meeting demonstrate "good intentions," but one idea stands out above the rest.

"Both (reports) share the transit advisory committee idea, and we think that's very, very important," Callahan said.

"That's going to be a great venue to address the multitude of issues."

He explained that the other measures proposed, as detailed as they are and helpful as they may be, are all concepts that would be better left to a new board or committee with relevant stakeholders around the table to discuss at greater length.

"We want to see this advisory committee up and running, then we can take all of

RECOMMENDATIONS

It's not until next year, but here's what staff are recommending the city set aside in the budget for transit safety in 2018.

- Expand the audio/video surveillance system to deter "undesirable behaviour" and help identify, investigate and prosecute perpetrators.

- Add one instructor and three dedicated relief operators to provide more conflict training for bus drivers.

- Fund $475,000 to $710,000 for five FTEs (full-time equivalents) for security to help bus drivers and passengers while also increasing awareness and enforcing the transit bylaw.

- Establish new point duty inspectors to assist operators and passengers at certain locations.

That's going to be a great venue to address a multitude of issues.

John Callahan

these suggestions and ideas and go through them one by one, hear from the right stakeholders, see what makes the most sense, and gives the most bang for our buck," Callahan said.

The report also details safety initiatives that have been added over time.

Callahan said many of the steps taken to date to improve safety have most likely helped, like the many cameras already on buses and assault prevention training for drivers, but he thinks future efforts will be more successful if evaluated and reviewed by the new advisory board.

"Cameras for example, they're great after the fact, great for getting footage of an assault or an incident and prosecuting an individual, but they do little — it would seem — to prevent assaults," he said.

"Maybe assaults would be a lot higher if we didn't have them, but it's tough to say without (evaluation)."

'Doing drag has changed my life'

Pride 30FOR30

Shows are a satisfying slice of life for Cake

Danelle Granger
For Metro | Winnipeg

For 26-year-old Aaron Mann, performing in drag is a form of artistic expression.

"Through it I have been able to channel my traumas and life experiences into something that is completely my own, which is so gratifying," said Mann, who performs as Cake. "Honestly, doing drag has changed my life for the better and has allowed me to embrace qualities about myself that I perceived as weakness and transformed them into strengths."

Mann — who goes by the pronouns "he" and "she" interchangeably, whether dressed up for a show or not — started doing drag three-and-a-half years ago.

"My interest in drag initially began with watching RuPaul's Drag Race. But the more research I did into drag, I realized that it was an amalgamation of my many creative interests, such as sewing, painting, acting, music," he said.

He started getting everything he needed for performing, including practising makeup and going to shows.

In drag culture, a new drag queen is taken under a more experienced drag queen's wing to learn. Vida Lamour DeCosmo and Satina Loren are Cake's "drag mothers."

When Mann started doing drag, he got involved with the Imperial and Sovereign Court of Winnipeg and All of Manitoba, which he describes as essentially doing drag for charity. Dressed up as Cake, she was crowned Imperial Crown Princess and also became a board member.

Last year, Cake decided to run for Empress, and the community elected her. She won and was crowned on July 16, 2016.

"Being Empress has been such an incredible experience. It has given me the chance to be a representative and advocate for the community," said Cake.

"I have been able to work with many organizations within the city and reach out and spread a positive message."

"It's a very humbling experience to put a piece of yourself out into the world and have it accepted."

Favourite Pride moment?

My favourite Pride moment would probably have to be the first time I walked as an out gay man. It was a very distinct moment of freedom for me.

Why was Pride important 30 years ago?

I think Pride was important 30 years ago because it took an incredible amount of courage for the originators of the first march to do what they did and put us on the path to where we are today.

Why is Pride important now?

I think Pride is important today because although the setting has changed a bit there are still steps we need to climb and issues we need to conquer to make our future even brighter. We should celebrate how far we have come, but we need to acknowledge where to go next.

ARTS

Short films emerge from underground film festival

Thomas Pashko
For Metro | Winnipeg

Ninety seconds hardly seems like enough time for movie credits to roll — let alone an entire plot to play out — but the quickest films remain the most popular part of the Winnipeg Underground Film Festival.

For the past five years, the festival's "90 Second" has offered fertile ground for emerging filmmakers.

The block program of short films, each one-and-a-half minutes in length, as the name suggests, is screening June 2 at the Rachel Browne Theatre.

WUFF cofounder and codirector Aaron Zeghers says the idea came from the Winnipeg Film Group, which discontinued the exercise.

"(Winnipeg Film Group) still does the One Take Super 8 event and the 48 Hour Film contest," Zeghers says.

"They stopped doing the similar 90 Second a couple years before WUFF started, and we decided to resurrect it."

Zeghers says the 90 Second has remained one of the festival's most popular screenings since it offers a diverse selection of films in a short time.

"It's a good primer for people who aren't as familiar with experimental cinema and want to get a sense of what it's like," Zeghers says. "If you don't like a film, the next one is coming in 90 seconds."

Zeghers says the 90 Second is also a great exercise for emerging artists.

"We wanted to encourage local filmmakers to make new work for the festival," Zeghers says. "It's a great opportunity to make work, have a deadline and create something short that doesn't necessarily cost too much money."

Local video artist Jaz Papadopoulos, whose work will appear in the 90 Second this year for the second time, says that the short format is very conducive to experimentation.

"It's so low-risk," Papadopoulos says. "90 seconds is a totally attainable goal. That's what drew me to the festival in the first place and enabled me to make my first video. I knew it made me willing to just try it out and see what happened."

Zeghers agrees that the short running time encourages more interesting work.

"Because it's so short, you almost don't have time to make a narrative film," Zeghers says. "You can take a lot of liberties and make something abstract."

WUFF runs June 1-4, with screenings at the Rachel Browne Theatre, Forth Café, Poolside Gallery and one secret midnight showing June 2 (the location will be announced that day). Tickets cost $10 for an individual night and $25 for a festival pass.

They are available at the door or in advance at Forth Café.

Because it's so short, you almost don't have time to make a narrative film. You can take a lot of liberties and make something abstract. Aaron Zeghers

Trudeau: Pope open to apology

INDIGENOUS PEOPLE

PM's would like church to say sorry for schools tragedy

Canadians are anxious to reconcile with Indigenous Peoples. Justin Trudeau described telling Pope Francis on Monday as he asked the pontiff to apologize for the role the Catholic Church played in the tragedy of residential schools.

The Pope — himself no stranger to the cause of social justice, he noted to Trudeau — seemed open to the idea, the prime minister said as he related the broad strokes of their private conversation at the Vatican.

"He reminded me that his entire life has been dedicated to supporting marginalized people in the world," Trudeau said after he arrived back in Rome.

Pope Francis also expressed his enthusiasm for working with the prime minister and the Canadian bishops on finding a way forward on the issue of an apology, as recommended by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

The commission included the demand for a papal apology — to survivors, their families and communities — as one of the 94 recommendations in its report on the dark 120-year history and tragic legacy of residential schools.

Trudeau, who has promised to act on each recommendation, had previously committed to speaking to the Pope about an apology, but pointed out he could not compel the pontiff to agree.

In 2009, former pope Benedict did express "sorrow" on behalf of the Catholic Church for the "deplorable conduct" by some members in their treatment of Indigenous children in residential schools.

Not good enough, said the commission, especially since it was not made in public, recommending an apology similar to one Benedict delivered in Ireland in 2010 to victims of abuse by the church.

Perry Bellegarde, national chief of the Assembly of First Nations, said he remains hopeful the Pope will come through with a formal apology.

"Pope Francis has a lot of influence on world thinking and is a very, very popular pope," Bellegarde said. "He's a very influential individual and to have him come would be a ... huge undertaking on that road to reconciliation."

NDP Indigenous affairs

critic Romeo Saganash, a residential school survivor, dismissed the issue as a "public relations stunt" that would do nothing to help Indigenous communities wracked by housing, clean water and suicide crises.

On Tuesday, Trudeau will continue his official visit to Italy, where he will meet Prime Minister Paolo Gentiloni and deliver an address to parliamentarians.

Trudeau is promoting cultural and economic ties between the two countries, including the Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement between Canada and the European Union.

A spokesperson said Trudeau had a private drink with former prime minister Matteo Renzi on Monday evening. In April, Renzi regained the leadership of the Democratic Party.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

METRO ASKS

What do you think of Trudeau's meeting with the Pope?

"For Justin Trudeau to speak on our behalf, unfortunately continues to breathe life into the ongoing historical record of the patriarchy of the Canadian state, paternalism of the Canadian state, toward Indigenous peoples. If he planned on discussing the role of the church in the 100-plus years of Canada's genocidal policy of residential school, he should have had survivors, there with him on that trip."

— Clayton Thomas-Muller, Indigenous activist

"I think it's an important step for Trudeau to remind the Pope that there are obligations and relationships within Canada that are worth considering if they are going to continue to have a presence within the country. You've got to start somewhere. And the apology is an important recognition that a harm has been committed." — Niigaan Sinclair, associate prof. of native studies at the University of Manitoba

Feds announce intent to match donations to alleviate famine

Gilbert

Metro | Toronto

The Canadian government is stepping up its efforts to counter the threat of famine.

International Development minister Marie-Claude Bibeau announced Monday the launch of the Famine Relief Fund, an effort that will match donations made to registered Canadian charities for the same cause between March 17 and June 30 this year.

The new commitment comes two months after Metro launched the Focus On Famine series, highlighting the growing hunger and famine in East Africa and the Middle East, and chronicling efforts of local immigrants to bring relief to desperate families.

The United Nations has already declared famine in some parts of South Sudan, while warning that millions of people in Somalia, Yemen and Nigeria are suffering from hunger and severe malnutrition.

About 20 million people in the four countries are at risk of famine, while drought and instability in surrounding countries such as Kenya and Ethiopia add weight to the crisis.

Canada has already committed nearly $120 million towards the $4.4 billion US required to avert the ongoing catastrophe, according to the UN.

"This relief fund is needed now more than ever," wrote UNICEF Canada chief program officer Meg French in a statement to Metro, noting the spread of the crisis on the ground is outpacing the response so far.

Jamie McIntosh, World Vision Canada's VP of programs and policy, said there's still an alarming funding gap but government efforts such as the new relief fund bring much-needed hope.

"There's still an opportunity to pull millions of people back from the brink of starvation," he said.

NOVA SCOTIA Texting and driving caused death, say RCMP

Haley
Ryan

Metro | Halifax

Police in Nova Scotia have laid a "unique" set of charges against a man accused of killing a pedestrian while texting and driving.

On March 11, RCMP say a 54-year-old man died after being struck by a car in Cape Breton, as he was flagging passing motorists for help.

The suspect vehicle failed to stop, a release said at the time, and the victim was taken to Cape Breton Regional Hospital where he was later pronounced dead.

"That's the first time I've seen that," Cpl. Jennifer Clarke, Nova Scotia RCMP spokeswoman said on Monday. "It doesn't mean it's never been laid before, but let's just say it's unique."

After an investigation, RCMP's Cape Breton Traffic Services announced on Monday they had charged a Thomas Joseph Smith, 26, of Sydney, in the case.

Clarke said the case shows how serious the consequences of texting and driving can be.

B.C.'s NDP strikes deal with Greens

Matt
Kieltyka

Metro | Vancouver

Green Party leader Andrew Weaver said he saw a different side of NDP leader John Horgan during negotiations since the province's historic election on May 9.

Both intend to see a different side of the Legislature soon, swapping their opposition seats for the other side of the floor to form a minority government.

The two parties have announced they've struck a four-year "confidence and supply agreement" to form B.C.'s next government, one that will end the Liberals' 16-year reign over the province. The NDP's 41 seats and the Greens' three would represent a majority of votes in the Legislature, more than the Liberals' 43.

Weaver has been in negotiations with both parties since election night and said he was willing to work with both as long as they met certain Green conditions, such as banning union and corporate donations in politics and moving toward a proportional representation electoral system.

The terms of agreement between the NDP and Greens won't be released until Tuesday (the NDP caucus still needs to ratify the deal), but Weaver said it will focus on commonalities between the party platforms.

The NDP supported both campaign financing and electoral reform during the campaign.

"We were very, very close with both parties," said Weaver, cryptically. "And there were some things that we felt were important where some values were a

I am very excited about the prospect of delivering to the people of British Columbia what they voted for on May 9, and that was change. John Horgan little more common than others."

One big hint the Green leader did drop, however, was on opposition to Kinder Morgan's Trans-Mountain pipeline expansion.

"Obviously there are some things that are near and dear to my heart, to the heart of my caucus colleagues, as well as to the hearts of the BC NDP and their caucus," he said. "One of the things I can say, the issue of Kinder Morgan is one that I have been heavily invested into. The issue of Kinder Morgan was one that was critical to [the Greens] and I think you'll see that reflected the issues that bring us together and highlighted the issues that separate us.

"And we've come to a conclusion that a government run by the BC NDP, with the support on issues around supply and budgeting [from the Greens], can in fact deliver the British Columbians a government that is focused on people."

Asked about their sometimes fierce and adversarial personal relationship — an issue that came up during the campaign — both leaders denied there would be any problems working together.

Message from our MLA

On behalf of the province of Manitoba, I am honoured to welcome all volunteers, residents, and visitors to the 2016 Niverville Olde Tyme Country Fair. Not surprisingly after 21 years, the fair offers a rich heritage against a backdrop of fun and excitement. I have every confidence that, over the course of the weekend, an exciting and memorable experience awaits you!

I encourage you to take part in the many activities provided for your enjoyment. The Niverville fair is woven together with a wide variety of local talents, events, and activities. Whether you take in the Wonder Shows Midway, Xtreme Motocross, or Aerobatics/Trampoline Show, you're sure to find thrills at every turn. Take advantage of the spectacular lineup of musical talent, savour the incredible food, and sit back and watch the Blackout Fireworks!

I would also like to express my gratitude and applaud the dedicated team of volunteers, organizers, and sponsors who work year-round to make this successful event possible. Your dedication and commitment is truly inspiring. Events like the Niverville Olde Tyme Country Fair provide a glimpse of what life in Niverville is like to the many visitors attending each year. In Niverville, I guarantee you will find a welcoming and friendly community filled with people who never hesitate to offer a helping hand.

As the MLA representing the Morris constituency, I thank you for supporting our community and celebrating with us at the Niverville Olde Tyme Country Fair. I sincerely hope you enjoy your time here and I look forward to bumping into you this weekend.

MLA Shannon Martin
Morris Constituency

Message from the Mayor

A big welcome back to all of you who will be joining us once again for our annual Olde Tyme Country Fair. If you've never been before, you really need to come and check out our fair. And don't forget to take some time to look around town to see what's going on.

Here's just a few things you'll see, and a few things we are anticipating in the coming years:

- The new splash pad in Hespeler Park, complete with change rooms.
- The Heritage Life Retirement Living/Life Lease Residence for 55+ and 5,000-square-foot attached medical center, which will be opening in the first half of 2017.
- As a council, we have committed $5 million toward a new multiplex with fieldhouse and ice arena, a $16-million project in total. Fundraising is in full swing.
- The province recently announced that a new high school in Niverville is a top priority. An official announcement is expected soon so that construction can begin.

As you can see, we are an intergenerational community. I would tell you more, but instead of telling you I should rather invite you to come check it all out for yourself. So why not grab the keys and the kids/grandkids and take a short ride out to visit us? We'd love to see you!

Show 'n' Shine Car Show

FRIDAY JUNE 9 | 6:00 P.M.

Expected to be the biggest ever, the Niverville Fair's Show 'n' Shine will be held Friday night. Last year's attendance was well beyond expectations. The Show 'n' Shine is open to all specialty vehicles.

Randy Kehler, owner of Vintage Tin Automotive Restoration, honours the beauty of automotive history and pours himself into award winning restoration projects every day. As the organizing force behind our Show 'n' Shine he invites you to share in his passion; either as a dreamer, or as a proud owner of your own masterpiece.

In the past, we have had over 175 vehicles representing everything from Rat Rods to Concourse restorations, from Big Fins to V-Twins. If you have a vintage car or any specialty vehicle (including motorcycles), we invite you to come out and show it off at the Niverville Fair's Show 'n' Shine.

We will be offering participants a roped-off car show area which is available on a first-come, first-served basis. The Show 'n' Shine is open to the public at 6:00 p.m. but will be open to participants one hour earlier. Our primary goal has always been to make the Show 'n' Shine fun and entertaining for both spectators and participants!

Trampoline Acrobats

This never-before-seen show is the first of its kind and will debut at the Niverville Fair.

FRIDAY JUNE 9 | 6:00 P.M. | 8:20 P.M.

SATURDAY JUNE 10 | 1:30 P.M. | 3:00 P.M. | 6:00 P.M.

Milord Entertainment has designed and developed the ultimate acrobatic and trampoline show for this year's Niverville Olde Tyme Country Fair. If you caught their act at last year's fair, you'll know it was a crowd favourite, and this year will be no different. You can literally expect twice the show: twice the trampolines, twice the height, and twice the number of acrobats. This never-before-seen show is the first of its kind and will debut at the Niverville Fair.

Milord Entertainment is a Canadian company with more than 25 years of experience in high-diving and acrobatic shows. Spectators worldwide have been astonished and amazed by the abilities of their acrobats, including in places like Canada, the United States, Saudi Arabia, Oman, the United Arab Emirates, Japan, China, Bermuda, South Africa, and more.

Members of the team are multi-disciplined, enthusiastic, and highly professional. They also enjoy meeting guests between each show. This year's team is led by Yves Milord and Felix DiPasquale, who have a combined experience of over 50 years.

Yves Milord, president of Milord Entertainment, has worked with Cirque du Soleil and has collaborated with Dragone Entertainment as a consultant and acrobatic coach for the production "City of Dreams" in Macao, China. For over a decade, Yves has also been in charge of the Canadian team for the Acapulco cliff-diving championship in Mexico.

Felix DiPasquale has over 18 years of experience and is one of the best Trampo-Wall performers in the world!

Blackout Fireworks

FRIDAY
JUNE 9 | 11:00 PM.

Our Blackout Fireworks presentation is moving back home to where it belongs: Main Street in Niverville.

The Niverville Olde Tyme Country Fair, in conjunction with the international award-winning design team from Archangel Fireworks, are excited to bring the blackout fireworks back into the fairgrounds. This spectacular show will explode with vivid colour, never-before-seen special effects, sound, and emotion.

Be sure to stick around after the Friday night concert to catch the show on the Elementary School grounds.

This brilliant show of light and sound will begin at 11:00 p.m. on Friday night when the lights go out.

The Band RBB

JUNE 9 | 6:30 P.M.

The Band RBB is an eclectic mixture of southern Manitoba musicians who love to play together, and for a cause. Their genre, inspired rock and blues, bridges a unique blend of acoustic soul and energetic electric rock and blues.

Based on a solid rhythm foundation, soaring guitar and harmonica leads are matched only by a soulful blend of passionate vocals.

Cold Creek County

Cold Creek County delivers a powerful, dynamic sound that's already captured a sizeable fanbase.

SATURDAY JUNE 10 | 10:15 PM

Cold Creek County come by their name naturally. Cold Creek, after all, runs through the rolling hills, apple orchards, and villages of central Ontario near locations the band members call home.

Nestled in the rural in-betweens of Peterborough and Belleville, Ontario, Brandon Scott (lead vocals/acoustic guitar) calls Brighton, population 4,800, home. Drummer Dougie Oliver is from nearby Hastings and its population of 1,200. Josh Lester (guitar/vocals) and Justin Lester (bass/vocals), the sons of bluegrass master Emory Lester, hail from the outskirts of Frankford, population 2,500. Lead guitarist Trevor MacLeod, the relative cityslicker in the group, is originally from Stratford, population 30,000. The band members literally cross Cold Creek to get to each other's homes.

"I'm a small town guy and I love it," says Oliver. "Because I've been here so much and my community has been so supportive, everyone is loving and small towns have that I've-got-your-back vibe no matter what."

"Our Town," the first single from the band's debut release, is a rousing sing-along that celebrates what happens when everyone in town lets loose on a Friday night. The song was produced by Scott Cooke (Chase Rice, assistant engineer on Florida-Georgia Line, Jake Owen, Dallas Smith) and co-produced by Oliver, who also co-manages the band with Chief, the titular head of Chief Music (Florida-Georgia Line, Dallas Smith, Chris Lane, and Joey Moi).

"Til the Wheels Come Off," the band's second single, is a country anthem all fans can belt out whether in their truck or at a concert. It was produced by Scott Cooke (Chase Rice, assistant engineer on Florida-Georgia Line, Jake Owen, Dallas Smith) and co-produced by Oliver.

Chief believes Cold Creek County, who've already opened for the likes of Tim Hicks, Kira Isabella, Travis Tritt, and Jason Blain in their short time together, have what it takes to touch country fans, be they from small towns or big cities.

"Cold Creek County is a band that has all the pieces to the puzzle to succeed," Chief says. "They're great people with a great drive. They can play, sing, and write music that is current and relevant to the country world and their dedication to putting on an amazing live show will surely transform into a large fanbase that will follow and love this band."

Cold Creek County delivers a powerful, dynamic sound that's already captured a sizeable fanbase. Heavily influenced by country and rock, the band brings both worlds together in a way that's sure to get your feet stomping. They spent 2014 honing their sound and performances and opening for country stars like Dallas Smith, Emerson Drive, Kira Isabella, and Jason Blaine.

The band has already been rewarded with three 2016 CMA Ontario Awards (Group or Duo of the Year, Rising Star Award, Fans Choice) and the 2016 CRMA Best New Group or Solo Artist: Country. The band was also nominated for three 2016 CCMA Awards (Group or Duo of the Year, Rising Star, Video of the Year ["Our Town"]), performing "Our Town" on the live CCMA television broadcast. Cold Creek County was also nominated for the 2017 Juno Awards (Breakout Group of the Year).

Cold Creek County is writing and recording their next singles and look forward to touring in support of their sophomore release in 2017.

The Washboard Union

Defying classification, The Washboard Union has become one of the most exciting and talked-about new bands on the Canadian country music scene.

SATURDAY
JUNE 10 / 9:00 P.M.

Five-time Country Music Award winners for 2016, The Washboard Union have defied classification and have become one of the most exciting and talked-about new bands on the country music scene.

This year, the band took home both Rising Star and Roots Artist of the Year awards at the Canadian Country Music Awards and won three B.C. Country Music Awards for Group, Songwriter, and Roots Artist of the Year. They had two top-ten singles with "Maybe It's the Moonshine" and "Shot of Glory."

As Warner Music/Slaight Music recording artists, they are an authentic blend of where country and bluegrass are headed next. This year alone, they have shared the stage with The Zac Brown Band, Keith Urban, The Band Perry, Reba McEntire, Dwight Yoakam, and Lonestar.

The Washboard Union, a sextet out of Vancouver, are led by principle members Aaron Grain, Chris Duncombe, and David Roberts. The three have been friends seemingly forever and the music they make has set them apart as one of the most unique talents in country music today.

Duncombe and Grain eventually packed up, left their hometown of Kelowna, and ventured to Vancouver where they moved into a beautiful 1920s Tudor-style mansion. By coincidence, Roberts himself rented in the same mansion and occasionally joined the brothers for impromptu single-malt-fueled jam sessions. These early sessions were the kernels of what blossomed and eventually gave rise to The Washboard Union.

Roberts reminisces that living there "was like living in a garden gone to seed." Grain provided guitar and vocals and Duncombe added his own voice and a banjo. Roberts, a singer and multi-instrumentalist with harmonica, guitar, mandolin, and the washboard (of course) in his arsenal, became the team's secret weapon.

The band's independently released self-titled debut album was produced by noted rock producers Garth Richardson (Nickleback, Biffy Clyro, Hedley) and Canadian Music Hall of Famer Bob Ezrin (Alice Cooper, Pink Floyd)—on the track "Half Cree"—whom the band are proud to call a friend and mentor.

In January 2015, The Washboard Union returned to Nashville, Tennessee to record their latest EP, In My Bones, in the legendary RCA Studio A. Originally built in 1964 as the home for Chet Atkins, RCA has been home to some of the most prolific recording artists in Nashville's rich history, including Dolly Parton, Tony Bennett, and the Beach Boys.

"Standing in the great room, you can literally hear a chorus in every wall. It remains as one of the most legendary music rooms in the world. I can tell you this, you don't sing in Studio A," says Roberts. "Studio A sings to you."

In My Bones was produced by Trey

Bruce (Faith Hill, Randy Travis, Diamond Rio), a name known well in Nashville circles and one of people responsible for saving RCA Studio A from potential demolition. The band met Trey after having written the song "Someday" together earlier in 2014. Trey called the band immediately after that first session and demanded he take the producer helm for the band's next record. The answer, of course, was yes.

The Washboard Union was joined on the recording of this album by a group of accomplished Nashville musicians including Bob Britt (Dixie Chicks) on guitar, Greg Morrow (George Strait, ZZ TOP) on drums, Michael Brignardello (Blake Shelton, Luke Bryan) on bass, and long-time guitarist Craig "Long Haul" McCaul.

The Washboard Union is a band you simply have to see live to fully appreciate.

Teakle Family Circus

Jacob Teakle

Jacon started juggling when he was ten years old at the Winnipeg Circus Club. With an amazing practise ethic, he has achieved many milestones over the last three years including juggling six balls, five rings, and four clubs. He's also a natural at Combat Juggling and Volley Club.

Jonny Teakle

Jonny was exposed to juggling at the very first meeting of the Winnipeg Circus Club back in 2012. To say he was a natural is an understatement. At 14 years old, Jonny is now one of the top technical jugglers in Canada and was a top-five finalist for the 2016 Canadian Juggler of the Year.

Sarah Teakle

Sarah discovered a talent and passion for hooping about three years ago at the Winnipeg Circus Club. She is now one of the top hula hoop performers in Winnipeg, and was recently one of the six worldwide finalists for 2016 Youth Hooper of the Year on www.hooping.org.

Aidan Mulvihill

Aidan resides in Stonewall where he has been impressing his friends and winning school talent shows with his unicycling and juggling skills. In 2016, Aidan joined the Winnipeg Circus Club and fit right in, quickly increasing his skills and learning to pass-juggle!

Aidan is a regular busker at The Forks and performed during the Santa Claus parade last year. Aidan had his debut performance with the Winnipeg Circus Club in March 2017 as part of a pass-juggling trio.

FRIDAY JUNE 9 | 5:45 P.M. | 8:00 P.M.

SATURDAY JUNE 10 | 2:00 P.M. | 4:30 P.M. | 8:30 P.M.

Nothing else can compare to someone jumping a 250-pound motorcycle 75 feet through the air... while doing a backflip or hanging off the back of it by one hand!

That is exactly what Kris Garwasiuk and his team do! Along with phenomenal bike skills comes their unique fun and entertaining style, something most other FMX teams fall short of delivering. All of the riders have crazy outgoing personalities that crowds can't take their eyes off of. Crowd interaction is the riders' favorite part of doing shows. With their colorful presence and showmanship, spectators are sure to be left with lasting memories!

Kris Garwasiuk and his team will be available after each show for autographs and to take photographs with fans.

The Big City All Star Band

FRIDAY JUNE 9 | 9:00 P.M. | 11:15 P.M.

The Big City All Stars are just that: "a big band with a big sound and comprised of the most talented performers in the City of Winnipeg," declares Niverville native and bandleader Carlin Lemon.

The band, formed in 2013, started with a core group of musicians getting together and discussing new concepts while deciding on which singers they most wanted to perform with.

The band can expand for larger shows to include as many as 14 members. Many of the All Stars perform with other high-profile acts, so when schedules conflict Carlin is able to replace one band member with another.

This dynamic band will again take the stage Friday night, backing a few local performances as well, including Brady Kenneth, Melanie Bergen, Carissa Klassen, Sylvia St. Cyr, Ed Friesen and Chantelle Braun!

The Big City All Star Band draws from all music genres—pop, rock, R&B, as well as country—and with 1,300 songs in their repertoire, you can be sure they will be playing your favorites!

The band's number one goal, says Carlin, "is to get you up and dancin' in the street."

So come ready to party!

Quinton Blair

Manitoba Country Music Association Roots Artist of the Year 2015-2016, Quinton Blair is a self-ordained troubadour, tale-spinner, and songwriter.

SATURDAY JUNE 10 | 7:30 P.M.

Honest as a day spent on a tractor, and driven like the drifting prairie snow, Manitoba Country Music Association Roots Artist of the Year 2015-2016, Quinton Blair is a self-ordained troubadour, tale-spinner, and songwriter. Imagine Steve Earle jamming with Dwight Yoakam, minus the burden of fame. Influenced by the likes of Rodney Crowell, Chris Stapleton, and Merle Haggard, his brand of strikingly diverse roots/country music casts a wide loop and captivates audiences with witty stories and relatable songs.

Blair's wide understanding of country music suits him perfectly in the task of working the stage with the all-stars of both roots and mainstream country music in Canada. He has shared stages with Del Barber, Scarlett Jane, The Bros Landreth, and the likes of George Canyon, High Valley, Corb Lund, and Emerson Drive. He has showcased and performed at the CCMA's, Manitoba Arts Network, OSAC, Dauphin's Country Fest, Festival du Voyageur, Canada Day at The Forks, and Chinook Rodeo Association Finals.

His blue collar approach to the music business has him pickin' a guitar nearly every weekend, and has allowed him to play stages as far north as Nunavut and as far south as Tennessee, demonstrating his insatiable thirst for the stage.

Blair's authenticity shines through in the many formats in which he travels. Blair as a solo artist relies on his guitar, witty stories, and keen ability to capture the crowd night after night. He is often joined by good friend Bill Western Jr. (Nathan, Del Barber) on pedal steel, whose chemistry and musical backbone lends to an unpredictably charming experience.

Through the summer months, Blair is most often seen moving his full honky tonk band back and forth across the prairies.

Eric The Juggler

Fire, double-bladed axes, and a chainsaw, Eric The Juggler can juggle it all. A professional entertainer for over ten years, Eric was originally trained by Buddhist monks in Tibet before touring throughout southeast Asia and Antarctica. Well...not exactly, but he has entered tained and taught circus skills all over Canada, and Canada's pretty big. Eric's style is authentic and down to earth, including humour, improvisation and lots of audience participation. Many an innocent bystander has ended up having learned to juggle.

Wonder Shows Midway

FRIDAY JUNE 9 | 5:30 P.M.

SATURDAY JUNE 10 | 12:00 NOON

Wonder Shows is a mid-sized carnival which accommodates over three acres of rides, games, and fun food. In the spring of 2000, husband and wife Ken and Anita Kiernicki, who have over 25 years of carnival experience under their belt, became the new owners of Wonder Shows. They vowed to continue with the company's "family fun entertainment" philosophy.

As you stroll through the midway, you will notice Anita in her office taking care of all Wonder Shows operations. From customer service to bookings and staff management, Anita is meticulous about assuring smooth behind-the-scenes operations. Kenny, the "big boss" of the midway, will be walking with a big cable or toolbox in hand, making sure your Wonder Shows experience is the best it can be for you and your family. Ken is also responsible for guaranteeing that the 30-attraction fleet makes its way through the route safely and securely, then setting it up and having it properly checked over by his very friendly staff.

Now in their fifty-third year, Wonder Shows has continuously maintained a clean, family-owned and operated midway, traveling to major festivals throughout Manitoba.

Over 160 killed, thousands displaced after mudslides

WEATHER

Sri Lanka grapples with devastating natural disaster

A group of Sri Lankan soldiers carried a body wrapped in a tarpaulin to police for identification, while others dug Monday through piles of mud, unearthing a motorbike, pieces of furniture and clothes, the only signs of 15 homes that stood on Kiribathgala Hill just a few days ago.

Helicopters searched elsewhere for people still marooned after rain-triggered floods and mudslides inundated villages last Thursday, killing at least 169 people and leaving 102 others missing, officials say.

The rains caused part of Kiribathgala Hill to come crashing down, burying the 15 homes and their 26 inhabitants under huge rocks, mud and fallen coconut trees, village officer Udari Erabed-da said. Soldiers have recovered 12 bodies, including those of two women and a child dug out on Monday. The others remain missing.

The hill in Sri Lanka's Ratnapura district, known for gems and precious stones, is 120 kilometres (75 miles) southeast of the capital, Colombo. Most residents make their living by tending small plots of tea or spices, or by working in nearby gem mines.

K.W. Robo Singo, 72, lost his daughter, granddaughter and four great-grandchildren.

"I heard a huge sound and saw large rocks and trees crashing down," Singo said. "Within five minutes everything was over, the whole area was a heap of mud."

Sriyani Mallika wept as she pointed to the area where her brother's home once stood. She said her brother, his wife and two children were all buried under the mud. Her brother tended a tea plot and wanted to educate his son to become a doctor, she said.

Terrified villagers huddled in a nearby school, having left their homes for fear of more mudslides.

With more rain expected later Monday, rescuers raced to evacuate villagers from the most vulnerable areas around the country. Already, more than 75,000 people have taken shelter in 337 relief camps set up in the south and west.

An air force helicopter on a relief mission crash-landed near Baddegama town in the south on Monday. All 11 people onboard escaped unhurt. Earlier, an airman died after falling while trying to rescue a marooned person from the air. Army boats skimmed along water-filled village streets, while flood victims waded through the brackish waters to army trucks carrying relief supplies. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARAWI

Fears of growing Daesh foothold in Philippines

Inside this lakeside city dotted with hundreds of mosques, a powerful militant designated by Daesh as its leader in the Philippines has managed to unify a disparate group of gunmen under a single command.

Over the past week, his fighters have shown their muscle, notwithstanding a sustained assault by the Philippine military and increasing fears that Daesh's ideology is gaining a foothold in this country's restive southern islands, where a Muslim separatist rebellion has raged for decades.

The army insists the drawn-out fight is not a true sign of the militants' strength, and that the military has held back to spare civilians' lives. Still, the fighters have turned out to be remarkably well-armed and resilient.

Attack helicopters were streaking low over Marawi on Monday, firing rockets at militant hideouts, as heavily armed soldiers went house to house in search of fighters. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLUEPRINT by Haley Ryan and Andrés Plana/Metro

Digging in downtown

Urban food forests are popping up in cities — places where people often don't live close to affordable, healthy food shops, let alone farmland. The situation is even worse in poorer neighbourhoods, a phenomenon known as food deserts. It's an international trend many are trying to reverse by planting gardens in empty lots, former landfills, even on barges to give urban dwellers a taste of the homegrown. Here are some ways cities are putting down roots.

1 Making an agrihood:

In Detroit, The Michigan Urban Farming Initiative is turning derelict buildings into an urban "agrihood," an alternative growth model that puts local food at the middle of development. The food forest is spread over vacant land, occupied and abandoned homes, and provides free produce to about 2,000 households.

FACEBOOK/THE MICHIGAN URBAN FARMING INITIATIVE

2 Guerilla gardening:

In South Central L.A., gardener Ron Finley came out victorious in a showdown with a developer who wanted to seize the land he uses as a community garden. Big names like Bette Midler helped fund the $550,000 the developer demanded, especially after Finley's rousing TED Talk on guerilla gardening in empty lots. His pitch: "Growing your own food is like printing your own money." GETTY IMAGES

3 A floating forest:

The Swale project is a forest open to foragers atop an old barge that travels to piers around New York City promoting public food. Visitors can harvest herbs, fruits and vegetables for free. The artist behind the project hopes more of the city's parkland can be converted into usable food-growing territory. INSTAGRAM/MARY MATTINGLY

4 Trees from trash:

The CERES Community Environment Park in Melbourne, Australia is built on a decommissioned landfill that was once a bluestone quarry. They now use solar energy to power a cafe and workshop space, while the farm yields hundreds of pounds of vegetables a year, plus a bush food nursery. FACEBOOK/CERES

5 Get on the vine:

San Francisco has taken a love of wine to the grassroots with the Neighborhood Vineyards project. Through the hillside nooks and crannies of Alemany Farms, 349 Pinot Noir vines thrive. The group provides education about viticulture, while of course bottling and selling their own wine. NEIGHBOURHOODVINEYARDS.ORG

PUBLIC WORKS The week in urbanism

GIRL GROWERS

B.C. has the highest proportion of female farmers in the country, according to census of agriculture data released earlier this month. Although the total number of farmers is declining, urban farms are credited by some with balancing out a gender gap in the, ahem, field.

What to do with an old railway facility? In Tilburg, The Netherlands, a former hangar and maintenance facility will be transformed into a mixed-use library. It will include a music hall, galleries, work space and a restaurant.

Jen Fischer is a certified Organic Masters Gardener and a graduate student at the University of British Columbia studying the intersections of urban nature, environmental sustainability and social innovation.

@JenFisch

URBAN DICTIONARY

DEFINITION

A popular urban planning movement for much of the 20th century, the utopian garden cities idea promoted suburban living surrounded by agriculture.

USE IT IN A SENTENCE

Although it was built on lofty ideals, the garden city gave way to sprawl, urban highways, and bad planning decisions.

WORD ON THE STREET by Aaron Chatha/Metro

Putting the public back in public art can help cities grow

The public in public art needs more attention, says consultant Ciara McKeown.

McKeown, with partner Brandon Vickerd, recently held a symposium at York University about the role of public art in Canadian cities.

She found many of the big conversations weren't around the art itself. The biggest issues were time, relationships and vision.

Talk to people

In cities with strong public art scenes, few pieces are dubbed controversial because the public is engaged in the process.

A big problem, according to McKeown, is when a piece is commissioned and — poof — overnight there's suddenly a sculpture in the middle of the city, with no conversation around it.

Looking forward in public art, she thinks artists need to be given more time to learn about a space, talk to the people in the community and learn its history. The public has to be part of the process — especially, she said, as there are often concerns when taxpayer dollars are being used to fund the art.

Have a plan

McKeown pointed to Vancouver or Waterfront Toronto as good examples of public art done right.

Instead of looking at public art on a case-by-case basis, the cities that are propelling it forward have cohesive vision, and often plan funding across multiple projects.

There's no standard process, but McKeown feels it helps when cities and organizations are able to shift, respond to new opportunities, and keep things feeling like part of a vision.

The worth of public art

Artists aren't just building this thing to fill a space. They're part of a conversation about what cities look like in the future, and where people in them belong.

McKeown believes public art asks vital questions about a city, and where or how it will grow.

KEYBOARD confessional

Why we tell Google our innermost thoughts and feelings — and that may be a problem for researchers

Genna Buck
Metro | Toronto

Humans are a dishonest species. We're not honest with our bosses, our friends, our family, our intimate partners, or with researchers who phone us for a survey.

But there's one situation when we don't lie. We don't lie to Google. The search engine is simultaneously our therapist, our confessional and our most trusted friend. Data scientist and economist Seth Stephens-Davidowitz, formerly of Google, has pored over the unfathomably large body of data concerning when, where and what people search on Google around the world. In his book Everybody Lies, he reports insights about what people are really thinking and feeling. He's learned Google users are kinkier than they admit, and more racist too, but most of all, people are desperately anxious and want to know they're not alone.

You were laughed out of academic journals with this idea. Now everybody's interested. What happened?

I was a graduate student in economics, and I became obsessed with all you can learn from what people search, particularly things people wouldn't otherwise admit. People lie to surveys, but they tend to be really, really honest on Google. I was considered very strange. I couldn't get the work published. I couldn't get an academic job. I was looking for other ways to get the work out there, and now I've written this book.

Did you learn anything profound about human nature? I think anxiety and insecurity is probably more widespread than we usually think. That would be a big takeaway. But I think also just people are complicated. The traditional methods of data collection have given us a very limited view of the human psyche.

Do you have a favourite finding?

Men make as many searches looking for how to give themselves oral sex as how to give a partner oral sex. My other favourite, which you would probably also put in the weird or one-off category — but I don't think it is — is that the top search in India starting

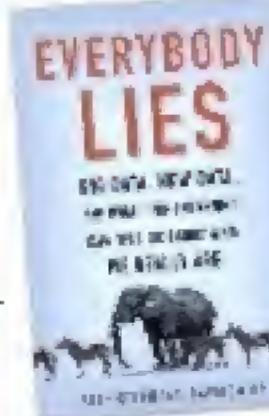

"My husband wants" is "My husband wants me to breastfeed him." It points to this idea that there are facts about human nature we didn't know. There seems to be a somewhat widespread interest in adult men being breastfed in India. It hadn't been picked up by any of the usual data sources and it isn't talked about. Well, why India? What causes this to be so much higher in India and nowhere else?

Is this (research technique) going to change the way we look at elections? (Searches containing racial slurs were strongly associated with areas that unexpectedly went for Trump, such as Michigan and western Pennsylvania). Surveys are getting worse and worse. The response rate is now under 10 per cent. Internet data is getting better and better. In a couple of election cycles, we're not going to be using surveys anymore. But (with election predictions), we're just going to predict an event that's going to happen in three weeks. The attention (on elections) is so enormous relative to its importance.

If elections aren't interesting to you, what is?

I talk about child abuse in the book. That's one area where the data is not good, because most child abuse cases aren't reported. But it turns out a decent number of children, really sadly, make searches such as "my dad hits me" or

"my mom beats me." So we now maybe have the best data ever on when and where child abuse is rising.

And I talk about racism and hatred. We can break it down minute by minute. We can see how people are responding to the words politicians use in speeches — is it calming an angry mob, or inflaming an angry mob? That is, I think, pretty revolutionary.

What are your findings on that front?

There is clearly a strategy that is much better at calming an angry mob. And it's basically don't lecture to them, but provoke their curiosity. Talk about Shaquille O'Neal being Muslim: don't talk about how it's someone's responsibility not to hate Muslims.

What are you looking for in the data now?

I'm researching anxiety. I've become obsessed with it, because there are lots of things in the data that are really, really surprising. I'll give you one example: When Trump was running for president, he was saying a lot of scary things. Pretty much all my friends and family members and liberal people said they're terrified. Now, if you look at the data in parts of the United States that are really liberal, you don't see an uptick in searches for panic attacks or anxiety or anything like that.

(Maybe) people don't Google anxiety about Trump, even if they're really anxious. I'd be really surprised by that. The second possibility is people have a fixed amount of anxiety — they would have been anxious about their jobs or their kids, but now they're anxious about Trump. That would be a revolutionary change in how we think about anxiety. The third possibility is that people exaggerate how anxious they are about Trump because it's politically correct, when they tend to actually be much more anxious about their own personal situation. But you don't bother your friends with that. You sound like a good person if you're anxious about Trump.

One of your oddest findings is that people often type confessions like "I'm drunk" into Google. What could they possibly be hoping to find?

It's very strange. It's a little bit like the confessional in Catholicism. It is a widespread use of Google to type complete sentences into the search engine. You (may) get message boards where people are feeling similarly, so you feel less lonely. If you type, "I hate my boss," you might get message boards of people complaining about their bosses. If you type, "I'm sad," you get message boards of people who are also sad and you realize, "Oh, I'm not alone."

MOVIES

Sandler, Pattinson draw awards buzz

It's a long way from May in France to February in Los Angeles, but the Cannes Film Festival has often been a breeding ground for Academy Awards campaigns.

Standing ovations at Cannes, which concluded Sunday, appear likely to lead to awards consideration for a number of big stars, including unlikely names like Adam Sandler and Robert Pattinson.

When Sandler has waded into drama, he's often won raves. But even more than his turns in Punch-Drunk Love and Spanglish, Sandler's tender, rumpled performance as a recently divorced father in Noah Baumbach's The Meyerowitz Stories (New and Selected) was hailed as a new high point for the Sandler. The Netflix release could also earn some attention for Dustin Hoffman, who with typical distinction plays the prickly father of Sandler in the film.

Meanwhile, Pattinson's scruffy, scuzzy performance as a Queens bank robber in Benny and Josh Safdie's Good Time was immediately hailed as a career-best for the 31-year-old actor. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Life after Vine holds 'a real live connection'

ON TOUR

Ruth B beyond six-second videos, drops first album

Even if you never used Vine, that now-dead, six-second video social network, you have heard the musicians that started there; it was very good to a few Canadian artists.

Shawn Mendes has been the poster child for its star-making ability, but Ruth B is ready to take her piece of the spotlight.

Since first posting snippets of herself writing the song that became the hit Lost Boy as a teen in her bedroom in Edmonton, B (short for Berthe) grew an audience while working at a Marshall's, then signed to a label, won the Breakthrough Artist Juno and just released her first proper pop album, Safe Haven. Now she gets ready to properly tour.

The now 21-year-old admits that it has been a whirlwind, and understands that she's not far removed from many of her fans.

"It definitely can feel busy sometimes, that things are moving fast, but I just try to live in the moment and kind of enjoy everything. It's all very new still and a different life, but it's fun. It's cool," she says on the line from Nashville, in the midst of a nine-stop tour of the U.S. "It's been really cool to transition from just a Vine artist to an actual artist with music out. It's been really nice to be able to connect with people with more than just the six seconds."

Safe Haven is full of ballads about love and heartbreak, all with a confessional, conversational lyricism that speaks to B's youth. All the same, she had been working on songs for years so, she says, she was ready to hit the studio when everything broke. It was recorded with Grammy-winning producer Joel Little, best known for working with Lorde.

"I learned a lot from Joel. He was awesome and really cool to work with, and he just does such a great job helping a new artist get to where they want to get, instead of putting his own stamp on it and making you something you are not," she says. "I learned a lot about how a studio works, how ideas evolve from just thoughts you have to bigger picture songs and just a lot of little things."

She says the title track is one of her favourites to perform, as it reminds her of home, family and friends in Edmonton, which is where she still lives. "I love performing Safe Haven, the song, because it's probably the most nostalgic for me; I have memories in that song. Every time I perform that it takes me to the same place," she explains. "The past couple of years are wrapped up in that song. When I wrote it, a lot of my life had changed drastically, but the one thing that remained the same was my family, my friends and my love for music, and it just makes me feel really safe."

B, who has described herself as "shy, with a social side," admits that she was signed before ever really performing and had to get over some stage fright, but she now relishes the opportunity to perform, especially when she sees people singing her songs.

"Yeah, I love that. I love people so it's great to meet people and hear about their stories and connect with one another through song," she says.

"That's probably my favourite part, establishing a real live connection with people."

DIGITAL EFFECTS

Facelifts without the knives

Johnny Depp is 53 years old but he doesn't look a day over 26 in the new Pirates of the Caribbean movie — at least for a few moments. There was no plastic surgeon involved, heavy make-up or archival footage used to take the actor back to his boyish Cry Baby face, however. It's all post-production visual effects, and after a decade of refining the process since Brad Pitt ran the gamut of time in The Curious Case of Benjamin Button, it's becoming commonplace in major Hollywood movies.

Depp is just the latest megastar to get the drastic de-aging treatment on screen, joining the ranks of Robert Downey Jr. (in Captain America: Civil War), Michael Douglas (in Ant-Man), Kurt Russell (in Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2) and scores of others getting digital face-lifts to play younger versions of themselves. In the old days, a lucky unknown look-alike (or look enough alike) could have scored the part of young Jack Sparrow or Tony Stark. Now, if the film has the budget, the stars get to have it both ways — and audiences get a nostalgic flashback.

Lola Visual Effects is responsible for Depp's transformation, and most of the Marvel tricks,

THE SHOW: Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt, Season 3, Episode 3 (Netflix)

THE MOMENT: The face-squish Richard Wayne Gary Wayne (Jon Hamm) kidnapped Kimmy (Ellie Kemper) and forced her to marry him. In prison, he now wants a divorce so he can marry Wendy (Laura Dern). Kimmy's roommate Titus (Tituss Burgess) asks Wendy why in hell she'd want to marry Wayne.

"With Richard I know what I'm getting," Wendy says.

"He won't cheat on me with my neighbour — because he can't. He can't scream at me when the Steelers lose. He can't flip my cereal bowl in my face and call me a dummy."

"A man flipped cereal on you?" Titus asks, hands on his face in horror.

"Because now I eat my cereal at home before I go to the prison," Wendy barrels on.

Titus grips his face so hard the flesh squishes between his hands. Yesterday I wrote about sitcoms delivering a social message. Here's another one. Jokes here fly thick and fast, both high

But there's a steel girder supporting the far-fetched premise: at heart, this series is about the crap some men pull, and the women who put up with that.

Kimmy's former boss Jacqueline (Jane Krakowski) is an ex-trophy wife awakening to her mistakes. Kimmy's neighbour Lillian (Carol Kane) only reluc-

PLAID FOR DAD metro focus on prostate cancer

“Your whole world is put off-kilter

“It’s incredibly scary. Your whole world is put off-kilter. It’s scary, it’s like a roller-coaster ride because you want the very best possible of all outcomes ...

Fortunately, mine is a story with a happy ending. I’m a facilitator of a support group for women and caregivers on a journey with their husbands, and I see so many other outcomes. And I consider myself to be just so incredibly fortunate, because all of those incredibly scary and life-altering changes that come when you are in a more advanced state of prostate cancer — I did not have to experience those with my family.”

WORLD OF DANCE

Canadian duo eyes $1M prize

After many late nights spent flipping and twirling in a Toronto studio, two dancers have landed a shot to make it big.

The team of Jenalyn Saraza-Pacheco, 16, and Luka Milacic-Perusina, 20, is the sole Canadian contender among 47 acts with eyes set on a $1-million prize awarded to whoever wins World of Dance, a 10-episode competition premiering Tuesday on CTV and NBC at 10 p.m.

The hopefuls were picked from thousands who auditioned from around the U.S. and internationally. Earlier this year, the locally based cabaret ballroom duo had to quietly slip out of town for show tapings, initially not allowed to tell anyone (not even their teachers) where they were going or what they were doing.

“It is awkward because you can’t give out too much information,” Milacic-Perusina said. “I had to be like ‘listen, I’m not going to Cuba — I’m actually going to do something, I just can’t tell you what it is.’”

Now that posters hyping the series — which bills itself as “the biggest dance competition in the world” — have appeared on Toronto bus shelters, the news is beginning to sink in for the dancers and their friends at home.

“We were in some of the promos on TV, and some people noticed us and were like ‘Hey! That’s you guys!’” said Saraza-Pacheco, who is in Grade 11. “It’s pretty cool.”

The specialty of Luka & Jenalyn, as they call themselves on stage, is their spin on cabaret ballroom: a variety of extremely acrobatic styles forged into a routine featuring lots of throws and lifts that, understandably, make their parents gasp.

The duo’s efforts will be judged by a panel including American pro ballroom dancer Derek Hough, R&B musician Ne-Yo, and show producer Jennifer Lopez herself. American dancer and actress Jenna Dewan Tatum is the host. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Get back into motion with message therapy

Most people will experience some form of back pain during their lifetime, but treatment from a registered massage therapist can help alleviate the pain and keep it from coming back.

Causes of back pain can include muscle strain, incorrect posture or body mechanics, trauma, excessive, or reduced spinal curvatures, pelvic floor dysfunction, mobility issues, repetitive or overuse injuries and disc herniation.

Sheila Molloy, executive director of the Massage Therapy Association of Manitoba Inc. (MTAM) says no matter the cause of the pain, registered massage therapists work with their patients to form an individualized plan to address the problem.

“Treatment plans will vary depending on the cause and severity of symptoms,” she explains. “The plan may include the use of various massage techniques, remedial stretching, exercise, thermal therapy and postural education.”

Molloy says working with a registered massage therapist can help relieve many of the symptoms associated with back pain including, muscle spasms and stiffness, radiating or focused pain in the neck, trunk, hips or extremities, inflammation, and difficulty sitting or standing for an extended period of time.

Genuine belief Bombers can challenge for Grey Cup

BOMBERS THIS WEEK

Ed Tait

Parachute in to any Canadian Football League training camp this week and it's guaranteed the messages will all sound the same.

Players, coaches and management will touch on the optimism levels being sky-high, about the quality talent recruited over the winter and how the opening practices of camp are the important first steps on the long road to the Grey Cup on the last Sunday in November.

That message was also being spit out here in Winnipeg after the first two days of Blue Bombers camp by just about anyone who had a microphone, camera or notepad shoved in their face.

Here's the thing about all that: for the first time in what feels like forever in these parts, that feel-good vibe seems legit.

That comes from many things, mainly a 10-3 finish to last season after a 1-4 start before the abrupt end in a West Semifinal loss to the B.C.

Everyone knows we took a huge step from the year before last season. But we've got more steps to take. Quarterback Matt Nichols Lions.

It also comes from a starting roster that remains essentially intact — save for the departures of defensive linemen Keith Shologan, Euclid Cummings, and Justin Cole, middle linebacker Khalil Bass and receivers Rory Kohlert and Ryan

Smith. That kind of continuity, having 18 of 24 starters returning, is rare in the CFL and almost unheard of in these parts, where it seems like a revolving door welcomed — and dispatched — any players who stepped into the Bomber clubhouse over the past few seasons.

"To be able to keep a team together like that means everyone is going to be hungry," said quarterback Matt Nichols this week. "Everyone knows we took a huge step from the year before last season. But we've got more steps to take.

"You go through growing pains and I really think this team is ready to make a run at a championship. These things sometimes take time, as much as you want to win every year. You have to have a mindset that you're going to win big games and make big plays when you need to. We made a lot of big plays, but in our last game, didn't make the two or three big ones we needed to make. That's the difference between going to a Western Final and having a chance at a Grey Cup and going home in the first round."

Now, the Bombers — like every CFL team — aren't without their question marks as training camp opens. There is a hole at middle linebacker with Bass now with the Ottawa Redblacks.

Kick returner Quincy McDuffie bolted for the Dallas Cowboys. The departures of Kohlert and Smith means there are openings in the receiving corps. The defensive line has some intriguing new pieces with the additions of Tristan Okapaulago, Drake Nevis and first-overall draft pick Faith Ekakite, but is also undergoing another makeover for the second straight year.

Still, all of this comes against a different backdrop in Bomberland this year. There is less doubt, more optimism and a heightened sense of expectation. Granted, that guarantees diddy squat when the season opens on Canada Day. But it sure as heck can't hurt, either.

Bettman reaffirms Olympic stance

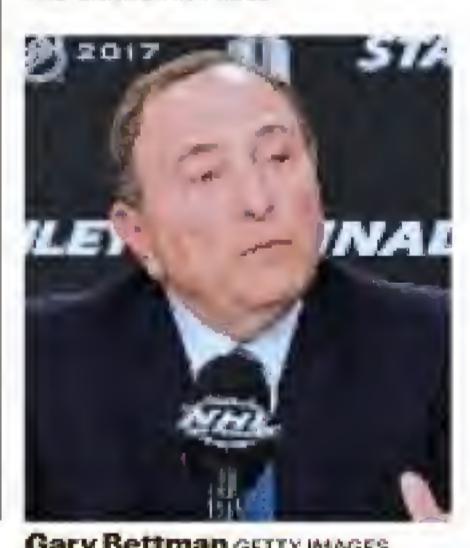

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman has emphatically restated that the league will not be making time in its schedule for the 2018 Olympics.

Speaking to reporters before Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final, Bettman said the league's stance on sitting out the Pyeongchang Games has not changed.

"We're not anti-Olympics. We're anti-disruption to the season," Bettman said.

Bettman said the league would not be participating in the Olympics back in April, but officials from the International Olympic Committee and International Ice Hockey Federation had expressed hope that he might change his mind.

NHL players have been at every Winter Games since the 1998 Nagano Olympics.

You could make this easy, healthy egg dish for dinner and still have some leftovers to take to work tomorrow.

Ready in 35 minutes

Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 20 minutes
Serves 6

Ingredients

- 4 strips of bacon
- 8 eggs
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
- 1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 Tbsp butter
- 1 apple, peeled, cored and thinly sliced

Directions

- Preheat oven to 450 F.
- In large, oven-safe skillet, sauté

the bacon until crisp. Turn off heat. Place bacon on paper towel to drain and wipe skillet with another piece of paper towel.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl, whisk eggs. Add half of both cheeses to eggs and whisk again.

Place skillet back over medium heat and add butter. Swirl that around the pan. Pour in eggs. Cook until edges begin to set. Crumble bacon and sprinkle on eggs. Lay down slices of apple in a circular pattern. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top.

Place in oven 15 to 20 minutes, until top is puffy and just lightly set. Remove carefully and allow to cool for a couple of minutes before slicing.

This is an exciting day! Expect to meet new faces and see new places. You have lots of energy to go with the ever-changing flow today. Stay light on your feet!

Taurus April 21 - May 21
Trust your moneymaking ideas today, because you are truly inventive and imaginative. However, keep an eye on things because this is a fast-paced, quickly changing day. This might affect your cash flow.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
You are supercharged with energy today! You feel restless and impatient. Routine will bore you. Instead, go with your impulses so you can seek out new experiences.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
You will not be patient with restrictions today — oh, no! You want to break out of your sandbox and do your own thing! This is why you are quietly plotting change.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
Your interactions with friends and groups will be sudden and unpredictable today. You might join forces with someone to introduce reform and improvement to society or your community. Work for good!

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your ambition is aroused today, which is why you might do something that surprises others. You're ready to go out on a limb to support your beliefs and your agenda.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Things are up in the air when it comes to travel. Travel plans might be cancelled or rescheduled. Alternatively, you suddenly might travel when you didn't expect to do so. Surprise news in the media also is likely.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You will defend your best interests regarding shared property, taxes, debt and inheritances today. It's possible that someone will challenge you.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Relationships with partners and close friends are stimulating but unsettling today. People will do or say things that surprise you.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You want to break free from boring routines on the job today. Modern, high-tech equipment might be introduced to where you work. It's a high-energy day!

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
This is an accident-prone day for your kids, so be vigilant. Meanwhile, social events suddenly might fall in your lap or, alternatively, be canceled. It's a crapshoot.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
You have lots of energy to make changes for the better at home today. Some of you will rearrange your living room.
